STARTLING TREASON DEVELOPMENTS REVISED AND CORRECTED Report of the Potter Committee.

THE DISLOYAL EMPLOYERS OF GOVERNMENT.

HOW THE REBELS PLOTTED AND EXE-CUTED THEIR TREASON. THE ARSENAL CASES.

TREDERICK WHITE, OR WHITE.

The reasons as algued by Major Ram-sy for the retention of Frederick White, will be found in his letter, inserted at length on a preceding mass.

He is entirely mistaken in assuming that White's name was erased by the Chairman from the list of disloyal employees, "after an interriew with E. N. Stebbins, military store.

interview with E. N. Stebbins, military store keeper and paymaster of the Arrenal."
What the Chairman of the Committe said to Mr. Stebbios on the occasion referred to was substantially, that with his assurance of the man's loyalty, the case could stand over until the Committee could re-examine it. Accordingly, since the commencement of the present session of Congress, Mr. White came before the Committee, and when the testimony was read to him, and the name of the witness given, he could not persist in desying its literal accuracy, although he alleged that the words attributed to him must have been uttered in jest. The testimony is as follows: "Immediately after the imaguration, in answer to a remark The testimony is as follows: "Immediately after the imaguration, in answer to a remark of mine that the manguration had passed off quietly, he said it had, but that Lincoln could not remain here longer than the loth of the mosts, March; that he would be driven out. The most of the committee was that Mr. White was consolous of having used the language stributed of the Committee was that Mr. White was conscious of having used the language attributed to him, and that he had become extremely sorry for his indiscretion. In reply to a question of the Chairman, he said that he was a equaint ed with William S. McPherson, the witness, and that he was a man of truth and loyalty. This admission of the upright character of the witness seemed to impress him still more with the truth of the charges against him, and to leave him no resource but to declare that he must have used the language imputed to him in jest. The evidence is conclusive that White's sympathics were, at the commencement of the rebellion, strongly against the Government; or else, that with the indifference of a mercenary, he was ready to espouse the rebel cause from he was ready to espouse the rebel cause from a belief that it would eventually triumph. The Committee Indulge the hope that such men will not be trusted in official positions under any Department of the Government.

PRIER M'GINNIS.

The first witness against Mr. McGinnis is William Youson, a fellow workman employed in the same shop, an applicant for the place of master, according to the certificate in behalf of McGinnis, given by Msjor Ramsay. He swears as follows:

"I know Peter McGinnis, also employed in Tanow refer accumins, also employed in the yard under Mr. Miller. He is acting as foreman. He was last winter an out and out secessionist—said the South ought to take this capital. He freely expressed disminor senti-ments, and said the South ought to have armed herself long ago." The fact alleged by Major Ramsay, that he was an applicant for the appointment of master workman, implies that he was one of the most intelligent and respectable men in the shop, and as no impeachment of his character is made by McGinnis and his friends in their efforts to.

by McGinnis and his friends in their efforts torebut the testimony, it must be held as valid.

The certificates given by Major Ramsay and Lieut. Shunk, in behalf of McGinnis, only as sure the Committee of his good private character, and fidelity as a workman, but no single fact or sentiment of his is furnished in vindication of his loyalty to the Union. The nearest approach to a fact of this kind, stated by the commandant, is as follows: "No man at the arsenal has manifested greater interest in carrying on the operations of the arsenal, since rying on the operations of the arsenal, since the war; as I have had the best opportunities of judging."

of judging."

The Committee have entire respect for any statement which Major Ramsay may make, but they must dissent from the inference of loyality to the Union, based on the mere fact that the party inculpated is a man of industry and application to his profession. There are thousands of such men in the employment of the rebel Government.

The second witness against McGinnis is Geo. B. Collison. He swears that "McGinnis is Geo. B. Collison. He swears that "McGinnis is Geo. B. Collison is the 4th of March, talked in favor of the South and secession." The character of this witness for veracity is unimpeached. Although, like that of Youson, it must be known to Major Ramsay, and other officers in the Arman Major Ramsay and other officers in the Arman Major

The third witness, Wilkinson, testifies that he knows Peter McGinnis intimately, and that "I know his centiments and feelings to be entirely with the South in this rebellion." Major Ramsay states that Wilkinson was dropped from the roll of workmen in the carriage making abop because of his arrest and committal to jail or the guardbouse of the Capitol, in consection with the killing of a citizen care the to jail or the guardhouse of the Capitol, in connection with the killing of a citizen near the navy yard, some months since, it being neces sary to supply his place immediately. The Committee have no information as to the circ cumstances of the arrest, or what became of it, and are therefore unable to say how far the fact should be taken to the prejudice of the witness as a man of veracity. But even without his testimony, the evidence is conclusive, on the oath of two unimpenched witnesses, that McGiunis has given utterance, since the rebellion, to the most treasonable sentiments. In order that entire justice may be done to the case, the certificates of Major Ramsay and Lieut. Shunk are appended to the evidence.

out his testimony, the evidence is conclusive, on the oath of two unimpeached witnesses, that McGinnis has given ulterance, since the rebellion, to the most treasonable sentiments. In order that entire justice may be done to the case, the certificates of Major Ramsay and Lieut. Shunk are appended to the evidence.

HENRY DULET.

The first witness against Mr. Dudley is Mr. Youson, whose character and position have already been discussed in the remarks upon McGinnis's case. He says: "I also know Henry Dudley, employed at the Arsenal, under Mr. Miller was reinstated on the 2 lat September, at the request of the Honorable Secretary of State, and with the approbation and by the direction of the Honorable Secretary of War." The Camirman of the Committee, having been cannot be set aside by the fact that the position of a smarked in that, and other cases of the kind jides of a note to the Secretary of State, advantage of the Secret remarked in tase, and other cases of the kind | do a da note to the Secretary on the 7th Octhat the position of a superior officer is not in vorable to the formation of an accurate judgment as to the opinions and sentiments of those so far below him in station. The intercourse between the witness and his fellow-laborers in the Arsenal is that of equals; whereas, it cannot be supposed that the commandant would admit of such familiarity on the part of the laborers employed by him.

ALPRED DEGLE.

The first witness in this case is Jabez Pittard, who swears that he "heard Degle say, since March last, that he thought the South right, and if it was necessary he would take up arms in defence of the South in the Febellion. Said he would not apply the capital in the Living and the capital in the capital defence of the South in the rebellion. Said he would not enlist in the United States army, because the United States were wrong."

The second witners is Benjamin King, who testifies the Dugle "has said that he did not intend to flight, but if he had to, he should fight with the South in this war. I heard him say this in March or April."

Reasin Furguson testifies, vaguely and dubiously, to the same effect.

BROWNY PROOFS.

RODYEY BROOKS.

The witness (Marcus Bickford) resides in Maryland and is acquainted with Rodney Brooks, said to be employed at the Arsenal in this city. "Heard Brocks say, scon after the groops came through-Baltimore, that he wished he was in Baltimore, to belp the Baltimoreans, that the troops had no business there, and ought not to be permitted to go through, or to come on the soil of Maryland." He (Brooks) "justified the attack, and said it was right. He said he was looking for a commission from the Southern Confederacy; that he had written for one."

DIBBEN ANDERSON.

Jabrz Pittard, whose evidence has been cited above in the case of Dugle, testifies that he had heard Libren Andrews, or Anderson, employed in the Arsenal, "use similar language within the same time. Both expressed themselves in sympathy with the South, and against the United States."

GEORGE WRIGHT.

Jonathan Dillen testifies that he knows Wright, and regards him as a secessionist, from his conversation, connections, and associations. A second witness, Wm. J. Cadrick, testifies as follows:

"He (Wright) told me he was a Southern man with Southern principles and feelings," and expressed himself in favor of recession. Afterward he told me he was a Union man.

The Committee has been informed by Major Ramsay that this man Wright left the Arsenal in September, under secret instructions from the Ordnance Office; and when last heard from was in Belgium. Mr. Wright is the inventor of a percussion cap machine—a machine of great a percussion cap machine—a machine of great skill and ingenuity; and it is well known to the Government that the strongest efforts have been ineffectually made to Induce him to join the rebels.

The Committee cannot but regard the fact The Committee cannot but regard the fact that Wright has been strongly, though icellectually, tempted to join the rebels, as corroborative of the testimony of the winces as to his secession proclivities; and they give it as their judgment that to send such a man abroad for any purpose, and especially for the purchase of arms, at a time like the present, is a dangerous and unnecessary experiment.

DANIEL O'CONNER.

A mistake was made as to the name of this person in the list of disloyal employees sent to the War Department. It was given in as Daniel P. Conner, and Major Ramsay says, in his letter above embodied in this report, that no such person is engaged in the Arsenal. The no such person is engaged in the Arsenal. The first writer says, "he was an out-poken, open, rank secessionist," and that he withdrew from employment at the navy yard after the Baltimore riot in April, but subsequently found work at the Arsenal.

Another witness, Reuben Philips, gives hearany testimony to the effect that O Conner left the navy yard and joined a secession military company in Baltimore, and asserts, as of his own knowledge, that he was, at the time the evidence was given, employed at the Arsenal.

JAMES GOOWEN.

The commandant of the Arsenal says in his letter, that no such name as James Gardain is letter, that no such name as James Gardain is on the roll of employees. It was written for Goodwin. The witness testifies that "he (Goodwin) is the foreman of the saddler's department. ISAAC MILLER.

This person, with several others employed at the Arsenal, was reported to General Scott in July last, as disloyal, upon evidence taken before the Committee. A few days thereafter, viz: en the 30th of the same month, the chairman received a note from Justice Thomas U. Donn, of this city, stating that "General Mansfield has directed me to commit eight gentlemen, by order of the House Committee, which I have done.
